15. (U) The U.S. Navy is presently in the middle of a major effort to modernize its fleet of aircraft carriers. The Navy has announced that it will be replacing its aging fleet of aircraft carriers with a new class of carriers. The new carriers will be larger, faster, and more capable than the old ones. They will also have more advanced weapons and sensors. The Navy is currently building the first of these new carriers, the USS Gerald R. Ford (CVN-78). The Ford-class carriers are the largest and most advanced ships ever built. They are designed to last for 50 years and to be able to operate in the most demanding environments. The Navy is also investing in new technologies to improve the performance of its carriers. This includes developing new propulsion systems, advanced sensors, and more powerful weapons. The Navy's goal is to have a fleet of modern, capable carriers that can protect the United States and its interests around the world.
