It is known that processes of aging are accompanied by changes in the structure of the organism. These changes are manifested in the form of a decrease in the number of cells, a reduction in their size, and a change in their shape. The most significant changes occur in the nervous system, where there is a loss of neurons and their connections. This leads to a decrease in the number of synapses and a reduction in the size of the brain. The changes in the nervous system are reflected in the cognitive functions, such as memory and learning. There is also a decrease in the number of blood vessels in the brain, which leads to a reduction in the supply of oxygen and nutrients to the brain tissue. This can result in a decrease in the ability to think and reason. The changes in the nervous system are also reflected in the physical functions, such as movement and coordination. There is a decrease in the number of muscle fibers and a reduction in the size of the muscles. This leads to a decrease in the strength and endurance of the body. The changes in the nervous system are also reflected in the endocrine system, where there is a decrease in the production of hormones. This can result in a decrease in the metabolism and a reduction in the overall health of the body.

presented to foreclose this trust deed as security, and a mortgage in the name of the person or persons holding title to the property. However, if said real property shall default at any time, the trustee may proceed to foreclose this mortgage and sell the same as in a common action of ejectment to foreclose his trust deed by action commenced in the name of the trustee. The trustee shall execute all documents as may be required by the trustee's name or affidavit and shall do all such acts and proceedings as the trustee may require to sell the said property and to collect the amount of the obligations secured hereby, irrespective of the time when the same were created or placed in sale, prior notice thereof as provided in the instrument provided in U.S.C. § 740.

1.5. Elimination of the trustee's right to compensation for a given amount and sale then delayed with an option to repurchase. If the date set for the trustee for the payment of the first proportion of expenses and interest, as aforesaid in Article X, Section 6, may be so postponed beyond the due date as to give the trustee an opportunity to collect the amount of the principal sum and the net amount of expenses, including costs and expenses necessarily incident to the enforcement of the obligations and trustee's right to compensation, it is agreed that the trustee's compensation and expenses shall be limited to the amount of the principal sum and expenses necessarily incurred, and otherwise cause the default, in which case the trustee's compensation shall be discontinued as of the trustee's termination of service. After date of sale, the trustee may sell and property either in one lot or in several lots, and may sell the same in parcels or parcels of auction to the highest bidder and may charge a premium or a price of sale. These shall deliver to the person buying the same an undivided fee simple interest in the property to be sold, but shall not convey any other interest, except in fee simple. The records of the deed of any part or parts of said property or of any interest therein, shall be held by the trustee, and nothing in this paragraph shall be held to affect the record or transfer.
