The true and actual consideration paid for this transfer, stated in terms of dollars, is $ 4,250.00. However, the actual consid- eration consists of or includes other property or value given or promised which is a part of the consideration, the amount of which is not stated. 1. The first step in the process of identifying a problem is to define the problem. This involves identifying the symptoms of the problem and determining the scope of the problem. Once the problem has been defined, the next step is to identify the causes of the problem. This involves identifying the factors that are contributing to the problem and determining the underlying causes of the problem. Once the causes of the problem have been identified, the next step is to develop a plan to address the problem. This involves identifying the actions that need to be taken to address the problem and determining the resources that are needed to implement the plan. Once a plan has been developed, the next step is to implement the plan. This involves taking the actions that are outlined in the plan and monitoring the progress of the plan. Finally, the last step in the process is to evaluate the results of the plan. This involves determining whether the plan has been successful in addressing the problem and identifying any lessons learned from the process.

1. The first step in the process of the investigation is the identification of the problem. This is done by the investigator who is assigned to the case. The investigator will then gather information about the problem and the people involved. This information will be used to develop a plan of action.

2. The second step is the development of a plan of action. This plan will outline the steps that will be taken to solve the problem. It will also identify the people who will be responsible for each step.

3. The third step is the implementation of the plan of action. This is done by the investigator who will carry out the steps outlined in the plan.

4. The fourth step is the evaluation of the results. This is done by the investigator who will compare the results of the investigation to the original problem. This will determine if the problem has been solved and if the plan of action was effective.

5. The fifth step is the reporting of the results. This is done by the investigator who will write a report that outlines the findings of the investigation. This report will be used by the management to make decisions about the future of the organization.
